The 2014 Economic Mobility Forum Presented by Vehicles for Change Introduces a Transportation Pilot Project to Launch in East Baltimore in Summer 2015

HALETHORPE, Md. (Nov. 25, 2014)—Baltimore-area nonprofit Vehicles for Change, Inc. (VFC) hosted the first-ever Economic Mobility Forum on Nov. 20 to develop transportation solutions for low-income families who lack access to reliable transportation in the Baltimore metropolitan area. More than 100 regional leaders and community members participated in a half-day think tank and contributed to roundtable discussions that will help shape VFC's Pilot Project.

The Forum marked the official introduction of VFC's Pilot Project that is anticipated to launch in East Baltimore in the summer of 2015. According to the Brookings Institute, more than 80,000 Baltimore residents lack access to a vehicle, while the Baltimore Neighborhood Indicators Alliance shows 75 percent of jobs are based outside city limits. The Pilot Project aims to develop a series of transportation initiatives that will increase access to jobs, health care and healthy living options, adult education and training, and before/after school and leisure activities.

"The challenges in this region related to the absence of viable transportation access create socioeconomic imprisonment for our communities, especially for low-resourced neighborhoods," said Diane Bell-McKoy, CEO of Associated Black Charities and moderator of the Forum's Impact on Healthy Living and Family Structure Panel. "These same transportation challenges also weaken the economic strength of businesses, limiting their access to very talented and capable individuals. I am excited to see VFC bringing all sectors of the region together for this discussion, allowing us all to see how we are collectively impacted."

Over the next six months, VFC will develop a plan utilizing a combination of various modes of transportation, including bus and van coordination to grocery stores and medical appointments; bike share programs; van share programs from the city to major jobs hubs; expansion of "Last Mile" programs; and low-cost car ownership through VFC's car award program. Upon completion, the Pilot Project will serve as a model for improving transportation networks in metropolitan neighborhoods across the country.

"PNC is invested in the success of the local communities we serve," said Séson Taylor-Campbell, development advisor for PNC Community Development Banking, title sponsor of the 2014 Economic Mobility Forum. "We are committed to supporting organizations like VFC in an effort to make the greatest and deepest impact in underserved neighborhoods that need help the most."

Local organization leaders, Donald Fry of Greater Baltimore Committee, Diane Bell-McKoy of Associated Black Charities, and Rodney Foxworth of Warnock Foundation facilitated panels highlighting transportation's impact on access to jobs, health care, day care and healthy food; physical and emotional health; family structure and children; the economy; and a business' ability to attract and retain employees at all skill levels.

A video memorializing the Forum will be published on the VFC website and YouTube at the end of December. For additional event photos or media inquiries contact Josie Hankey at 410-420-2001 or by email at Josie.Hankey@FallstonGroup.com.

About VFC

Vehicles for Change accepts and repairs donated cars and awards them to prequalified families for as little as $750, enabling low-income families to become self-sufficient. A nonprofit organization, VFC receives 99 percent of its car donations from the public. Since 1999, VFC has awarded more than 4,700 cars to low-income families, changing the lives of more than 16,400 people. Eligible families are referred to VFC through partnering social service type agencies. VFC car donors gain a substantial tax advantage that's not available with most other charities. VFC is one of the few organizations in the country that makes it possible for donors to deduct the full fair market values of their car, because their donation is awarded to a low-income family.
